A Message from your Yearbook team...

This year our yearbook team grew and more students got involved with the planning and execution of the yearbook.

Our hope is that you will treasure this book and all the memories in it.

Special mention to Will Daniels and Alex Sondheimer, who helped pick the theme and many of the photos used in the yearbook.

As always, most of the amazing photography is from Mr. Stevens and Gustavo, so big thanks to both of you!

The cover was designed by grade 9 student Joaquin Padolina and was selected from over 30 cover images. Congratulations, and enjoy!

Headmaster Mr. Beatty

This year Mr. Beatty spent every morning on the Layby, shared hundreds of Georgian handshakes and served bushels of vegetables at lunch all for the RSGC students. Always trying to keep the joy and laughter alive at the College, he wrapped up every Assembly with one of his endless supply of Dad jokes.

Prefects

Head Boy- Tom Xie

"The best part of being a prefect is seeing your peers laugh and enjoy the activities that the group has organized. Or when you hear people talking about the events in the hallway in anticipation or in reminiscence. For me, the highlights of the year as a prefect are 1. When we exceeded the Movember fundraising goal and shaved Arjun's hair. 2. When we were organizing Grade 9's bowling night."

Eric Yao

"As Communications & Social Prefect I got to work with a team in this engaging leadership role
The highlight of my year was leading assemblies and organizing spirit week and special events."

Simon Cox

I was this year's extracurriculars prefect, and the best part about it was meeting and connecting with younger boys through the various activities we had during the year. A personal highlight was helping out at the grade nine bowling night. It was especially gratifying to see people from different schools bond over bowling, and later "speed meeting." As a side note, I just HAVE to show off a little bit for coming up with by far the most controversial "speed meeting" topic: "Is it pronounced GIF or JIF?" -Simon Cox

Canterbury

My name is Callum Rand, and this year I had the opportunity to be a house captain for Canterbury. Throughout the year, I was able to connect with students who I had never met before and help show people the spirit that makes this school unique. My highlight of the year would have to be all the chances I have had to interact with the new boys. I remember how welcoming everyone was when I first joined the school, and I am so thankful that I was able to be a part of that for others.

Westminster

Will Pearce '24

For me personally, the best part about being a house captain was getting the chance to see everyone enjoy the events that you help organize.

The highlight of my year was when Bobby and I helped set up Halloween decorations and handed out hot chocolate and apple cider. We got the chance to talk to a lot of boys from all houses from both the junior and senior schools.

Winchester

York

This year, I had the pleasure of representing the most untouchable, mentally tough and determined house at RSGC. The York house will go down as one of, if not the greatest house in this school's existence.

Being a house captain means hard work, initiative and dedication to your beloved house.

To be a house captain, you must demonstrate a love for your house, while showing unwavering leadership towards your members.

Walking up to that stage this year, there was no doubt in my mind that York was going win. The satisfaction of raising that cup towards my house was indescribable. I felt like the man. I encourage everyone to run for house captain to share the same experiences I had.

-Sam Andersen

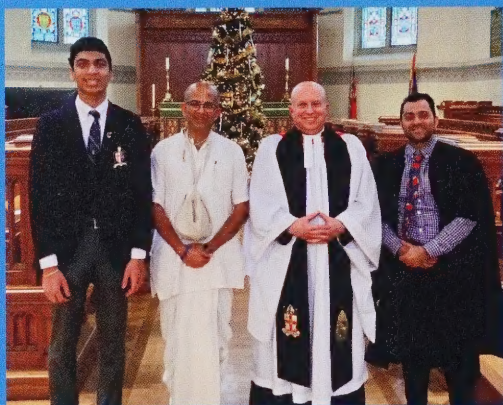

This year, I was one of two York House Captains. For me, one of the best parts of being a House Captain was getting the opportunity to run activities for events like Spirit Week and Halloween, many of which I enjoyed as a student in previous years. It was also awesome getting to know more students throughout the school and having the chance to work with some amazing people. A highlight of mine was definitely getting drenched with water balloons that day in Spirit Week. Both House Captains and Prefects came together and we all knew what would happen to us, yet we did it anyways. The students enjoyed it a lot, which was what mattered most. And of course, I can't possibly forget lifting the House Cup for York. What kind of a House Captain would I be if I wasn't proud of our great House winning such a prestigious title? In all seriousness, I'm extremely grateful to have had this opportunity and I can't wait to see what next year's group brings. -Vithusan Jegatheesan

Chapel

with Rev. Dr.
Leatch and Henry

Under the leadership of the Rev. Dr. Jim Leatch, Anglican services were held in the school Chapel from September 2022 until June 2023. In addition to the weekly full-school Choral Evensongs on Thursday afternoons, services were conducted every Tuesday morning for the Senior School and every other Friday for the Junior School. Special services marked Orange Shirt Day, Reformation Day, Remembrance Day, the École Polytechnique Tragedy, Pink Shirt Day, Black History Month, Holocaust Remembrance, Indigenous History, Tamil, and Asian-Canadian Heritage. Hindu, Jewish, and Sikh guest speakers addressed the staff and students about their faiths. We conducted a commemorative Evensong and a Eucharist to celebrate the coronation of King Charles III. The College Choir and the Servers' Guild supported the Chapel programme throughout the academic year .

Thanks to the boys for keeping the good times rolling. Thanks to Mr. Donnelly for teaching me what a pro move looks like. Gracias señora Francis por mi familia española and thanks to Mr. Ruscitti for always looking out for me. Thank you to everyone that made my time at RSGC one I won't forget.

Joseph Birdsell-Farrow

I would like to thank all the teachers and staff that have helped me throughout my four years at RSGC, and a special thank you to Mr. Donnelly for his guidance as a hockey coach and as a teacher. I would also like to thank the guys that came out every Friday for intramural soccer.

P.S. - I would never live in Sebring, Florida.

Julian Borg

"This is not a hangout space," it was.

Lukas Bowman

Thanks to all my friends and the class of '23 as a whole for making RSGC such a great time.

Thanks to Mr. Beatty, a great advisor and a constant source of happiness at school.

Thanks to Dr. Evans, Mr. Evans, and Mr. Hutton, among many others, for giving me teacher relationships that went beyond teaching into a friendship.

Thanks to the kitchen staff for being so friendly and making great food every day.

Thanks to Miguel for keeping the school running.

I appreciate everyone I named more than they could know. Best of luck in the future to all my fellow grads.

I'm sure the physics community would approve when I say: I'm moving north in life.

I still remember my first day here, being taught how to give someone a Georgian Handshake:

- Look them in the eyes
- Firmly grip their hand
- Say something nice

Then we were told to try it with someone nearby. A boy who I now know to be Titus Appleyard walked up to me, and I'll never forget what he did. He looked me in the eyes, firmly gripped my hand, and said, "Your fly's down."

Thanks for the six great years I had here. I'm sure I'll be back soon to complain about how they changed everything.

To sign off, here are a couple of out-of-context quotes I've collected recently:

- "You can say anything about anything" - Mr.Aziz
- "Stealing is fine" - Mr.Beatty

Arjun Deckha

Wow! What a transformational four years this has been. From entering the school as a cunning yet uncouth boy and metamorphosing into a confident young man with many interests and abilities, I can't describe how much RSGC has impacted my life. I would like to thank all the fabulous teachers and friends that I have made along the way at the Royal College. I will remember all of you throughout my life and cherish how you've prepared me for my journey into adulthood.

"There are no goodbyes for us. Wherever you are, you will always be in my heart."
— Mahatma Gandhi.

Elias Dimakos

Thank you to the awesome faculty, friends, and family that supported me through my 6-year tenure at the college. My experience at RSGC has been full of ups and downs, but I never imagined that my experience would have been as great as it was.

Alex Elder

Remember, it's better to cheat than repeat.

Alex Felesky

RSGC was an amazing home for me for the last four years. I will be forever grateful for the teachers that spent long hours helping me and my friends and made it all bearable. Thank you RSGC. P.S. Sebring, Florida, is not all that.

Braden Flint

I'd like to take a moment to thank all the people that have made my four-year experience here the best it could've been. From the teachers greeting me in the hallways to seeing my friends in all my classes, I looked forward to seeing everyone here. The Dollarama runs at lunch break, and the soccer games on the turf highlighted my time here. I'd also like to thank my parents for helping me through my academic journey here.

Michael Flynn

All the teachers at this school have put in so much work and made me feel truly a part of something, so thanks for the effort put in to help us be best prepared as we bloom out into the world like cherry blossoms in the hot April sun."The sheep pretend the wolf will never come, but the sheepdog lives for that day."
- Vincent "Mad Dog" Coll.

Ben Furnish

This school has been a second home for me over the last ten years, and I am thankful for everything it has taught me. I've made lifelong relationships here, made so many lasting memories, and learned through triumph and adversity. Thank you to RSGC for allowing me to grow in these last ten years, and I will never forget this amazing place.

Adidev Gopalakrishnan

Ask not what your GPA can do for you but what you can do to uplift your GPA. And hey, to Mr. Donnelly, Mr. Farrar and Dr. Leatch, who generously rounded up my grades; this wouldn't have been possible without you! Thanks to everyone who made my academic roller coaster ride bearable!

Eric Graham

Benjamin Heike

I can't believe I'm finally graduating. It feels like yesterday I was a freshman, nervous and excited to start high school. I am so grateful to be a part of this community. You guys are the best. Seriously, thank you for not calling the cops on me when I set off that firework in the cafeteria. That was awesome. A blast. Literally. But hey, at least I made some history, right?

William Hooper

"Give a man a fish, and you've fed him for a day. Give him a poisoned fish, and you've fed him for the rest of his life."

Will Houslander

From grade 7 to grade 12, RSGC was my second home. I've laughed, learned, and made lifetime memories. Whether it was staying up late to watch the first-ever Raptors finals game on the grade 8 trip to Ottawa, taking my long strolls to the dragon's lair and bathroom to avoid playing the saxophone or pulling an all-nighter to finish my AP Research paper (thanks Mr. Mooney), RSGC holds a special place in my heart. And let's not forget the grade 11 trip to BC, menu-beans, apples, and mayo sandwiches. But most importantly, RSGC provided me with much more than an education - it's provided a supportive community of teachers that helped shape who I am today and the opportunity to create unbreakable bonds with friends. I give special thanks to Mr. Kotecha, Ms. Dickinson, Ms. Turner, and Dr. Lambersky for their unwavering support and encouragement. Thank you, RSGC, for giving me a home away from home and a lifetime of memories.

Sebastian Isaac-Gooden

Sebastian Isaac-Gooden was not able to submit his grad quote as he was busy eating and had forgotten about the May 12th submission date. He requested that his quote be "Something funny and also add emojis."

Aris Kanellopoulos

Thank you to everyone who has helped me on my journey.

William Keene

For the ten years I have spent at RSGC, my peers and teachers never failed to make me feel welcome in the community and put a smile on my face.

Thank you to Mr. Rankin for teaching the best course at the college: grade eleven biology. Even though I did not continue with grade twelve biology, I always enjoy our conversations in the hall and your sense of humour.

Thank you to Mr. Fleming (Drake super fan) for dealing with my impulsive decision-making throughout my university application process and always making me laugh and find a positive outlook on my post-secondary education.

When I reflect on my final year at RSGC, I could not be more grateful for the academic and motivational support my teachers and friends have given me. I wish the class of 2023 the best of luck with their endeavours in the years to come and, most of all, the faculty that make this school the great place it is. "This is where the fun begins" –Anakin Skywalker.

Luis Keesmaat Freeman

I want to say thank you to all the incredible teachers at RSGC. I am forever grateful for your support and help throughout the years. High school would not have been the same without all of you.

Jackson Kellar

-Taking the TTC every day was fun. (Not)

-I will miss the morning polar bear dips at camp.

-Thanks for all the memories, guys!

-Thanks for a great six years!

Zachary Kim

I've had an amazing experience at RSGC, and I'm especially thankful to my parents. Without them, RSGC would never have been a possibility, and for that, I am extremely grateful. And to finish, a quote from my late grandfather: ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country. Thank you, RSGC

Trace Landon

"If you're not failing at something, you're not trying hard enough. Failing is part of it, you know; if you're not trying hard enough to fail, then I think you're in trouble because that, you know, teaches you more."

- Johnny Knoxville

My time at RSGC is full of good memories from the first day in grade 7 to this day in grade 12. I would like to thank all the teachers, staff, and students for the amazing years. I've learned many lessons at RSGC; the most meaningful happened in my grade 9 science class. Who could've guessed that mixing a chunk of sodium and water could cause an explosion, a teacher, a table, and the ceiling to be lit on fire, and an evacuation of a classroom?

All the best to you, lads, and thanks again for a great few years!

Thank you to the people at RSGC who helped me shape my skills and grow as a person. I will not forget the memories I have had throughout the years since I came to the school in Grade 6. Thank you for the numerous years of ski team racing, basketball, soccer, golf, and of course, all the amazing opportunities. I will miss each of my peers and hope the best for each of you in your future endeavours. Thank you all for a good run.

Logan Mahaffy

It's been a great seven years at RSGC. Thanks to all of the teachers who have supported me over the years, especially Mr. Farrar, Dr. Leatch, Mr. Donnelly, Dr. Evans, Mr. Kotecha and, of course, the original stoic and the 90% king, Dr. Newton. Shoutout to all the lads who made every year fun. "It ain't about how hard you hit. It's about how hard you can get hit and keep moving forward" - Rocky Balboa.

Hutton Mann Shaw

I love walking through the halls of RSGC with a friendly grade I'm so close to, being welcomed into sports and I especially love the connections that I have with my teachers. I'd like to thank Mr. D'Arcy, Mr. Chow, Ms. Ghoreshy, Ms. Hart, Dr. Evans, Dr. Lambersky, Mr. Rankin, Mr. Doerksen, Mr. Mooney, Mme. Francis and every other teacher of previous years who ignited and sustained my love for learning. Thank you for being so passionate, light-hearted, and interested in my success.

Of course, my parents and brothers have made this whole opportunity pleasant and possible, so they deserve the biggest thanks of all. The days are long, but the years are short. As I study for my final exams at RSGC, I wonder why I ever wished school away. You never realize how fast it'll go—I sure didn't. As Dumbledore says, "It does not do to dwell on dreams and forget to live." Sometimes it's important to look around rather than ahead. Like me, you may just realize how lucky you are.

Throughout my journey at RSGC, I was able to form so many new friendships and connections with both classmates and teachers. I met so many great teachers who helped me achieve success and have turned me into the person I am today. I also met so many long-lasting friends that I will be boys with forever. Overall, RSGC has given me so much and has provided me with so much comfort and support, which I am very grateful for. I plan to bring all the Georgian values I have learned over the past four years into the real world.

Legacy can be defined as the profound and lasting impact of specific events or actions that occurred in the past or within an individual's life. RSGC has played a significant role in shaping who I am into the best version of myself. I appreciate my successes and growth resulted from the support I received from my teachers. I feel a sense of responsibility to leave a positive legacy by doing what is right, supporting others, and facing challenges with courage and determination. While I acknowledge that I am not perfect, I strive to improve and remind myself daily to be the best version of myself. My commitment to personal growth and positively impacting the world is my Legacy. I want all of you to go out, do something extraordinary, and not let anyone tell you otherwise. You are your boss.

Jonah Rasch

Hunter Renaud

These last four years have proved that life's about the journey, not the destination. Thanks to all the teachers, coaches, and friends who have made my RSGC experience so special. Cheers!

One needs to look no further than our chapel to know how special RSGC is. This grand building was meant to be a massive Cathedral with a footprint of the entire senior school, of which only the choir area was completed. This was never completed, but something even more wonderful has grown in its place: the college. The variety of personalities and interests at this school is almost absurd, and the fact that we all gather nearly every day under the same beautiful roof is truly special. I will be forever grateful for my time here.

Andrew Samworth

RSGC has been my second home for the past 10 years, and I can't wait to move out.

RSGC, you've shaped my journey and transformed me into the person I am today, leaving an indelible mark on my character and potential. The invaluable lessons learned within your halls and the unwavering support from the RSGC community have ignited my passion, guiding me toward a future I am eager to embrace. As I bid farewell, I'll cherish the memories, the bonds, and the transformative experiences that I will forever miss.

Jamie Strain

The most valuable lesson I have learned at RSGC is that everyone has something to offer and is worth listening to. Instead, pay close attention, actively listen, and try to identify the morals and lessons in each story or situation. "Yesterday is history, Tomorrow is a mystery, but today is a gift. That is why it is called the present." – Master Oogway.

Thank you, Ms. Ghoreshy, for pursuing me to challenge myself and persevere. Thank you, Mr. Chow, for your incredible patience. Thank you, Mr. "Gum Drops" Aziz. The passion you bring to our class makes dull subject material enjoyable. Thank you, Ms. Dickinson, for guiding my relentless "deriving."

Sean Sun

If you're gonna dance with the devil, you better be prepared when he sets you on fire.

Joshua Tavares-Pitts

I have had so many good memories, and I feel very sad to leave it behind, but on the other hand, I'm also incredibly glad it's over. I can't wait to intend to get a good night's rest and then end up staying up until 3:00 am playing League of Legends. Perhaps in university, I will finally get a life (unlikely, I know). My social life is currently a superposition of playing video games and explaining random space facts to people who clearly aren't listening. I can't wait to meet my prom date, who was literally arranged for me by my very social friend (unprompted, I might add).

All jokes aside, RSGC has definitely been a great experience. The amount of people here who truly care about you is astounding, and I am lucky to have had the chance to meet all of these wonderful people. I am very proud to say I am an alumnus of this beautiful place.

Evan Tecimer

I am and will be forever grateful for my time at RSGC.

The person I've become today is a product of the school and my experiences here. Thank you to all the dedicated teachers, and a special thanks to Mr. Kotecha and Mr. Blanchette for being there for me both in and out of the classroom. Co-creating the RSGC panini sandwiches (real), deriving Tecimer's Law, and bothering Mr. Chow for hours on end for retests, are some of the things I'll never forget. Special shout out to the U13 BC soccer trip and the highlight of my grade 12 year, footy intramurals, Farrows on top!

Angus Ternan

I'm really going to miss RSGC. I did a lot of growing up here.

I really want to thank my parents, my sister, my girlfriend Alex and my teachers (Senior School and Junior School) for all their support getting me through to grade 12. I made some amazing friends here and I hope to stay in touch for a long time. Also, thanks to Ms Mladen for always picking up the ball when I drop it.

John Ternowetsky

As an AI language model, I cannot provide a grad quote on your time at RSGC as I do not have specific information about your experiences at RSGC. However, here is an example of what one might look like:

"After 6 years at RSGC, I can finally say that I loved it. Sorry for doubting you, mom and dad. As it turns out, you can have a good time without the kids from your elementary school. Thanks to all the teachers for caring about my education and helping me when I needed it the most. And, of course, thank you to the kids here that truly gave me the Georgian experience. I will never forget this place."

Jack Ujejski

I came into an RSGC in grade seven an absolute maniac, and with the help of teachers, administrators and my lovely parents, I am now leaving a better man than I would have ever thought I could become. This has been an amazing six years, and even though I may still be a maniac, I am also a respectable and "extremely handsome" (Mom) Georgian Graduate.

Andy van Nostrand

If you ask me for advice, I will tell you to take every chance you get to socialize. Talk to classmates (it's usually better than work). Distract your teachers! Ask about stories they don't remember telling you, and make sure to ask for A LOT of detail. And when possible, try to involve your entire class in conversations, even the teacher. Once you learn this valuable skill, you will be able to handle anything RSGC can throw at you. Some may call this tactic delusional, but they haven't experienced the rush of starting a physics assignment 3 hours before the due date.

On a serious note, I would like to thank Ms. Ghoreshy, Ms. Dickinson, Mr. Jamieson, and Mr. Rankin for the lessons they've taught me in and out of the classroom, for encouraging me to grow as a person and for challenging me throughout my time at RSGC.

Wolf Virgo

I just want to say how grateful I am for the amazing friends I made at RSGC and for all the great memories and experiences. There's something truly special about this school that you might not recognize or appreciate until it's time to leave.

I'll always cherish listening to one of Mr. Seale's rants, one of Ms. Dickinson's stories about Bentley, or waiting all week for footy intramurals on a Friday afternoon. Also, if you aren't in Sebring, Florida, then where are you?!?! P.S. For anyone reading this, here's your reminder to do your MyEconLabs.

Robert Zhang

1. Sorry for being the worst grade 12 that ever existed in this school
2. Thanks for giving me the worst year of my life (although most of it was self-inflicted, so it doesn't really count)

Tom Xie

I thank RSGC and my peers for teaching me that I can always be better. One day, I'll stand in a room full of mirrors and say that I'm surrounded by winners.

Eric Yao

To Ms. Ghoreshy, I thought chemistry was all about reactions, but you proved it's about survival. And, of course, our conversations taking up half the class about reading Mandarin and the profound meaning of the word 'DISSOCIATE!!!' will have a place in my memory.

To Mr. Wade-West, the maestro of melodies, you taught me more than just the flute and saxophone. You nurtured my passion for music since grade 4 - you're the wind beneath my wings!

Ms. Hart and Dr. Evans, the dynamic duo of English enlightenment, thank you for shaping my literary prowess. From making me question my existence through Hamlet to watching Harry Potter, you've unleashed the power of words within me.

Ah, Mr. Doerksen, the troubadour of calculus! Your quadratic formula song will forever be stuck in my head, haunting my dreams and delighting my mathematical soul. Thank you for proving that math can indeed be a symphony of numbers.

To Ms. Dukes, running Web Design Club (and stopping us from pirating websites) together has been an adventure like no other!

Finally, big ups to Mr. Rankin for letting me hang out in his class every morning

RSGC's Student Online Newspaper

By Tarek Alvi

My knees cracked loudly as I slid off my chair and crouched in the darkness. The chair made a dull thump sound as its seat snapped back into a neutral position. When the theatre is silent, every little noise sounds like a cap gun being fired into a mausoleum, especially when it's caused by your own actions. I imagined every head in the room turning to glare at the cause of the interruption of their immersion in the Senior School production of A Midsummer Night's Dream as I carefully crept down off the small platform in an awkward squatting position and semi-blindly reached for the off switch of the amp with my left hand, all the while keeping my right hand firmly against the surface of the volume antenna of the theremin. I fumbled around on the speaker until I felt the button, and after a small click, I could relax. This happened every single time I finished playing a piece, which occurred about 10 times total throughout those 105 minutes. Every single time that happened, my knees audibly conveyed their pain, and by the end of the show, I was vowing never to play the theremin for Dr. Newton ever again for the sake of my joints.

I originally got the role of thereminist in the play after volunteering to be the backstage manager in the tech crew, but seeing that nobody else was interested in playing the theremin, I decided to take up that spot as I didn't want to miss such a good opportunity to play an instrument that I was interested in.

There were problems from the start. I tried to use some online tutorials to improve my technique, but the model that I used was too small for it to be very helpful, so I ended up fiddling with the controls until I figured it out. Dr. Newton also assigned me a few songs to master for the play by emailing me YouTube links. The first few were simple orchestral arrangements of songs that I'd heard before, but for some reason, the last few were progressively more difficult. The final link he sent me was accompanied by the encouraging message, "Maybe you could replicate what this guy is doing." Clicking on the link, I found myself faced with a thereminist playing on a huge expensive model with very articulate hand movements. Further research found that he had been playing the theremin for longer than I'd been alive. Dr. Newton seemed to have very high expectations of me. Did I mention that he gave this role to me a month away from the performance? I had never even touched a theremin before!

One of the most daunting undertakings was actually incorporating the theremin into the physical set of the play in a clean fashion. It ended up involving borrowing a tall swivel chair from the Junior School, a large wooden box to put the theremin on, and a small amp that the theremin was supposed to be plugged into, but its original power cord was too short to reach the socket. Thus, the nest of extension cords coiled around the amp like a haphazard structure built by a robotic bird to protect its oddly cubic child. Despite all the brainpower that went into coordinating the volume of the instrument, the best strategy we could come up with for keeping the theremin quiet when it wasn't being played was also the most uncomfortable for the actual thereminist, as described at the beginning of this narrative. But it worked, and that's all that mattered.

When I practiced the theremin in the theatre, the room was comfortably warm with a lighting atmosphere that encouraged productivity, but more importantly, it was quiet. When I practiced at home, I plugged earbuds into the instrument to block out any excessive noise so that I could focus. The instrument itself is extremely sensitive to the point where the slightest movement can make the note jump an entire octave, so concentration is key. This information will be important to keep in mind when I describe the next step of the rehearsing process: communication with the tech crew.

The tech crew really runs the show, from the people backstage whisper-yelling at the actors because they missed their cue by 0.02 seconds to the people in the lights and sound booth who spend most of the show gaming, occasionally glancing up in annoyance and pressing a button on the console when they receive a command from the stage manager. The stage manager is the overlord of the whole circus, sitting in the shadows with meticulous notes on who goes where and what happens at what time.

But there needs to be a way for him to communicate all of these directions to the people who need to hear them. This is where the headsets came in. Each member of the tech crew received a pair of headsets to keep them in contact with each other and the stage manager. As the thereminist, I was considered part of the sound department, so I received a pair that I was forced to wear the entire time so that the stage manager could tell me my cues. The headsets were designed to relay instructions to people in an environment where nobody can see anybody else, such as a dark theatre. In an ideal world, all that you would hear while wearing a headset would be the mic check at the beginning of the play, then a series of commands received and acknowledged, situation reports from backstage during a costume change, and proactive thinking communicated during times of crisis. In an ideal world, that is. As anyone who has ever been in a public lobby of Call Of Duty knows, if you put a microphone in front of a child, they sure as hell will say the most out-of-pocket things they can possibly think of, knowing that someone is going to be hearing that on the other end. So while all the things that I previously mentioned did happen, a lot of jokes were had as well.

Let's quickly recap:

1. The theremin is a very sensitive instrument that requires a lot of focus to play.
2. I have to wear a headset connected to the stage manager so he can tell me when to play.
3. That headset is also connected to the other members of the tech crew, some of whom are very prone to making jokes over the comms...

I think you can tell where this is going.

One of the things that I had to do as the thereminist was play a filler piece to entertain the audience while some of the cast members went backstage to change their costumes. This was supposed to take about 2-3 minutes (although during the dress rehearsal, it ended up being around 10 minutes because they got locked out of the changeroom, and nobody had a key). The first performance of the play went alright, even though I made a couple of mistakes due to nerves, but then again, everyone made mistakes due to nerves. I guess that also made it a learning experience which we all benefited from greatly. During the second performance, we were much more relaxed and free-flowing. I carried that mood into the filler piece of the performance. Everything was going fine until I heard the click of a mic over the headset.

"Jerry just farted in the light booth. For just $2 a day, you can save a Goran from further atrocities."

The sound of muffled giggling entered my ears, and I refused to stop, despite the stage manager's repeated commands of "clear comms, clear comms." A confused mix of emotions bubbled up inside of me, sending my brain into a tailspin. Part of me wanted to jam my finger down on the talk button and yell at them, which was especially hard considering that I need both of my hands to play the theremin. Part of me tried to stop myself from laughing because I'd start making mistakes if my body started shaking. There was also a literal spotlight shining on me so part of me was trying to maintain a neutral facial expression, to no avail. I pushed on through the distractions, albeit with more slip-ups made than I'd have liked. When the laughing subsided, Goran mustered up the sheer audacity to say, "Hey Tarek, if you want to stop playing, just tell us through the comms, and we'll turn off the spotlight." The part of me that wanted to yell at him flared back up inside of me, but I tried to keep things cool on the outside. An eternity seemed to pass. Finally, after about 3 minutes, the backstage manager gave the all-clear, and I got the cue to stop. After turning off the theremin as quickly as I could, I began whispering all the things I wanted to say into my headset.

"Goran, I swear to God, bro, that was not cool, okay? Like, first you break the number one rule that I set down by telling a joke, not only distracting me but also making me laugh which is the last thing a thereminist wants to happen during a performance. Second, you just had to ask me if I wanted to stop by..."

Yadda yadda yadda.

Over the sound of the actors speaking, I heard a squeak slip out of someone's mouth backstage. I couldn't see anyone, but I'm pretty sure their faces were turning blue from holding in their reactions. Goran nearly managed to derail the entire performance, but on the surface, it still appeared to be running smoothly, and before we knew it, Puck was giving their final remarks on restoring amends and the cast was bowing. The audience was applauding, and Andrew Samworth was giving a speech. He thanked everyone but the tech crew, and although we were pretty miffed about that, we still congratulated each other over the comms.

It was a rickety ride behind the scenes, but against all odds, we had managed to pull it off.

The long and gruelling ski season was finally ending. The hot sun's powerful rays reduced the snow to a miserable slushy state. Spring skiing was uncomfortable, but at least it was almost over. Suddenly, I heard my radio beep and my supervisor's voice. "Meeting at the clubhouse as soon as possible," she ordered. Initially, I thought my fatigue after a long day could not get any worse, but my mental and physical exhaustion peaked at that moment. I went down to the clubhouse and joined a circle of other instructors. The scene in this room was unlike any other. People were sleeping on the benches, some sprawled out on the floor, and everyone's eyes were closed. It was clear everyone was thankful that the season was over. This atmosphere was abruptly shattered like glass when our enthusiastic supervisor with never-ending energy walked in. She immediately got to the point, asking, "Who wants to work for our March break camp? Loud sighs erupted from every end of the room, almost in sync, but her enthusiastic tone never faded. When nobody answered, she began to ask every instructor individually, using every rhetorical strategy possible. However, many people still didn't budge, each making a new excuse, further increasing her desperation. That's when the guilt tripping and pressure increased to new levels. As my supervisor went through the line of other instructors, I thought, What if I did the camp? I got paid significantly more and had nothing to do for the first week of March break. But I was still not convinced. Then it was my turn to be interrogated. She attacked me with so much ethos, pathos, and logos my brain felt like static. She hypnotized me. Finally, I agreed to work for the first week of March break camp. A week later, it was finally time to face my responsibility. I arrived at the parking lot, which had transformed into small hills of slush and muddy water. As I walked to the club, my feet sank into the shining wet snow with every step. My body felt miserable in my jacket due to the spring warmth. The weather made it feel too hot to wear a jacket but too cold not to wear one. I concentrated on maintaining a happy and enthusiastic attitude as I trudged through the slush to the enormous clipboard that displayed the names of the students I would be teaching this week. I also remembered that this was only a four-day March break camp compared to the entire season I had spent teaching.

I kept assuring myself that it wasn't that bad. However, this upbeat attitude suddenly vanished when I got to the clipboard. I stared at this board with my jaw hanging, amazed at how I could have ended up with this group. I counted all the names individually. When I got to eight, my heart rate went up. But that wasn't it. My eyes moved to the right side of the sheet, which showed the programs these kids had signed up for. There's no way, I thought to myself. While a few of the younger kids had signed up for a beginner's program, I also had older kids signed up for the racing program. How was I supposed to teach both at the same time? I needed to say something. I appealed the issue to my supervisor, but to no avail. Despite praying, begging on my knees, and reasoning with her, the lesson was about to start.

With all my kids present, it was finally time to take the chairlift to the top of the hill. Finally, a parent of one of the kids said to my supervisor, "don't you think this is too many kids for one instructor?" She was unphased by the comment and replied back, "Max can handle it!" I set aside the three youngest to take up the chairlift myself and sent the remaining five kids up with adults. The rickety chairlift travelled up the hill, starting, stopping, and creaking multiple times. This rocky path to the top of the hill made the kids more nervous and my job even harder. At last, we reached the top. I grabbed the kids, hoisted them off the chairlift and directed them to a meeting spot. While the rest of my group skied their way to the spot, two kids could not move. They were stuck and struggling with their legs perpendicular to each other in "pizza" formations. "Wow," I thought to myself. I took a few seconds to think about how to address this situation. I tried to encourage the kids and give them some tips. But after 15 minutes of pure struggle, I realized they were not ready for this hill. These eight-year-olds had to get to the bottom somehow, and there was only one way. I reluctantly told the rest of my kids to ski to the bottom and wait for me at another meeting spot while I grabbed both struggling skiers, one on each side of me and began to make my way down this long hill. I had gotten to the midway point of the hill, sweat lined my forehead, and my muscles struggled to lift these units of kids down the hill. With hard work and the worry of my group wandering off somewhere while I was gone, I reached the bottom. Without delay, I gave the two struggling skiers to another instructor on the beginner hill. I then went to my group, feeling proud of myself and how I dealt with that challenging situation and continuing like nothing happened. I felt like Kobe Bryant, still shooting his free throws after tearing his Achilles. When I got to my group, my newly discovered pride was snapped in half by the grandmother of one of the kids in my group. She screamed at me for making the kids wait for me while I helped the struggling skiers get down the hill. This grandmother's anger resembled that of a bull, and I had been painted red. Surprisingly, her anger didn't faze me. I tried to calm her down and explain what happened. She shot back a question in a tone loaded with attitude: "Why don't you just have more instructors?" I replied with the most professional answer possible, "Talk to my supervisor," and took the kids back up the chairlift.

To my relief, the lesson went on smoothly after its rough start. The kids were very social with me and each other. They even started to become friends. My group was in good spirits and constantly making jokes. March break camp didn't seem so bad.

We got on another chairlift like we had been doing all day, but this time was different. I immediately noticed that one of my kids didn't have the bottom half of his body on the chair. I thought back to what my supervisor told me to do if I ever found myself in this predicament: I had to push the kid off the chair while it was still low to the ground. I attempted to follow the words of my supervisor and tried to push him off, but I felt a lot of resistance. I noticed the kid gripping the side of the chair like a rock climber hanging off a mountain. I yelled for the chair operator while struggling to get this kid off. Nothing was working. The chair had lifted me and this kid about 20 feet high before it finally halted. I helped the kid hold on by pulling him up by his jacket while we waited for the operator to roll out a crash bag. At the absolute worst moment, the now screaming and panicking kid let go of the chair. I now carried all eighty pounds of this kid by only my fingertips. My grip was rapidly deteriorating. The only thing helping me was pure adrenaline pumping into my bloodstream. I wasn't thinking I was only acting. I had reached the end of my grip on the jacket, but thankfully the crash bag was laid out underneath us. I let go, and the kid fell backwards through the air, almost in slow motion like Mufasa in The Lion King. The kid landed in the bag and ended up with no injuries, but there's no surprise why he didn't come back to skiing for a couple of days!

The worst day of my life ended with a couple of thank-you's and an hour and a half of paperwork. That day will forever be locked in my memory, along with the raw emotion that occurred during it. I like to see the positive side of negative experiences. So, I can say that this experience has taught me a few beneficial lessons for the future. Firstly, I realized I am not in control of everything, and bad things happen. Secondly, I learned to always listen to safety talks. Lastly, I will ensure I never work for a March break camp again!

TORONTO, ON—In a society where nearly everything seems to be digital, it should be no surprise that the internet is filled with loudmouths who would not do half the things they said online if confronted in person.

To delve deeper into this issue, we must look into some instances where highly skilled keyboard warriors have been caught in action.

Under the comments section of a Connor McGregor UFC fight, @Paul 'The Destroyer' Lambert commented, "Connor is such an idiot. If I was there, I would have dodged the jab, faked the cross and landed a double leg, then I would have taken his back and executed the rear naked choke! Connor is a complete amateur!" This was typed by the jobless 30-year-old Paul Lambert with his Cheeto's-pasted fingers from the comfort of his stained couch in his mother's basement. Paul has not left his house in two and a half weeks, and his only exercise is stumbling to the trash can to dispose of his Cheetos bag.

The issue gets worse. In the comments section of an ABC news coverage of a house fire, where one fireman was, unfortunately, unable to save one child, @Mitchthefisherman commented, "What baloney this FDNY is! If that was me, I would have single-handedly run the ladder to the burning window, jumped in, got the child and got out of there! I can do anything when my adrenaline spikes. It is a shame we have absolute wimps on our front lines these days! Shame on the firefighter, and shame on the FDNY!"

Funnily enough, FDNY's official YouTube account responded to Mitch in the comment section and said, "@mitchthefisherman, we would love to entertain you at our 51st division recruitment this Saturday in Manhattan. Since you clearly have what it takes, we believe you would be a great asset to the force, and the lives you save will be insurmountable. Please reach out to FDNY@nyc.gov for more information regarding your application to the team."

Days after the response, Mitch made his way to New York to undergo numerous evaluations to determine whether he was a fit, mentally and physically, for the department, as he boasted.

Unfortunately, Mitch's stint as a firefighter did not last very long. He apparently arrived very confident; however, after struggling to put on the firefighting gear, he collapsed from cardiac arrest. Doctors on the scene attributed this episode to Mitch's low activity levels and recommended that he spend less time online to prevent further health complications.

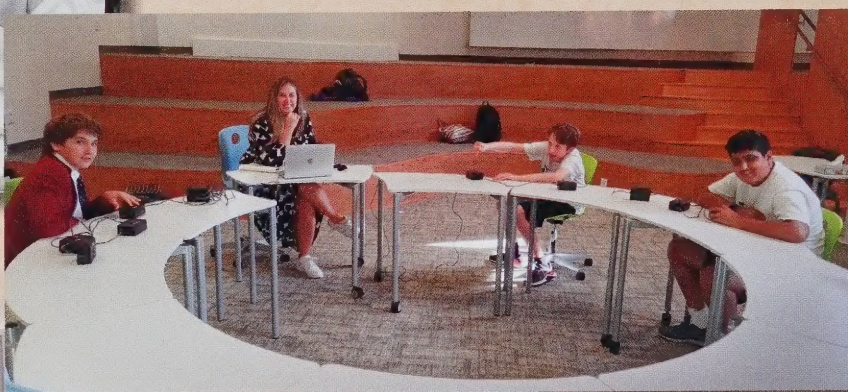

The last instance of a keyboard warrior is Canada's very own Justin Trudeau. Justin tweeted, "@premierdougford, if I see you, it's on! I despise what you have done to the province of Ontario, and the only way you will learn is with these fists! We know how it went the last time I boxed someone, so serve this as a warning, you buffoon!"

A month after this tweet, parliament was scheduled to meet in Ottawa, bringing Justin and Doug together in real life. Justin politely walked up to Doug, shook his hand, and congratulated him on all of his hard work to gentrify Ontario; he told Doug how he believes he is the "better" brother and asked him how his kids are doing while posing for a selfie.

So folks, the lesson from all of this? Stay away from commenting from the comfort of your keyboard. But if you do, make sure you can back it up in person!

The 2022 Senior School Cross Country Team comprised of 25 resilient, hard-working, collaborative, and determined runners. Students trained together four times a week, each practice increasing in level of difficulty as the season progressed. Led by grade 12 student Titus Appleyard as the team's motivating and inspiring captain, members of this team consistently helped each other run to the best of their ability. The CISAA Championship race was a target for us all year. Highlighted by Quinn Mitchell's 1st place finish in the novice race, our entire RSGC squad earned a first-ever tie for the first-place overall boys' CISAA team. This strong showing gave the team the chance to compete at the OFSAA championship race, competing against the best high school distance runners in the province. We are so proud of the novice team who came in 6th and the junior team who came in 5th in the province! This success is upstaged only by the team members' true Georgian Spirit and support of each other throughout the season.

The U12 soccer team had a phenomenal season, not only in terms of games won and lost, but also based on the players' growth, dedication, and sportsmanship. The athletes on this team played like true Georgians throughout the season, and they all, without exception, showed improvement in their individual skills and team-play. The coaches want to give a big shout-out to our "rain warriors," who practiced with grit during a cold and wet early morning practice on the turf, and a special thank you to Spencer Scott in grade 11, who came out to a few early morning practices to help coach the team.

The coaching staff wants to say thanks to this talented group of Georgians for their passion for the game of volleyball and their outstanding representation of the Royal College. Working with this team has brought me hours of joy and laughter. Three to four training sessions a week, early mornings and long bus rides, it didn't matter, it all just brought us closer together. A couple of memories that I will carry with me are; the positive energy, the leadership of our returning champs, getting to 20 points versus the beasts from UCC, Jackson's footwear, Luis' serve, Bobby's free ball footwork, Cole's bizarre self talk while serving and Dougie's never-ending quest for the perfect "knighted" celebration. Thanks, guys. I hope to see you back at our alumni game next November.

The U16 hockey team had an excellent regular season. Our team finished second overall with a 6-2-0 record. Our team played well enough in our first six games that we thought we could walk away with the championship as an undefeated team. Unfortunately, we lost our last two regular season games against Holy Trinity School and Toronto French School. As it turned out, we had a chance to clean our slate as we were scheduled to play TFS in the semi-finals and would undoubtedly face the most potent team HTS in the finals. In the semi-finals, we went into the second intermission down 1-0, it looked like our season and hopes for a banner could be coming to a close, but our team stormed out of the intermission and scored three unanswered goals. We held on to a narrow 3-2 win and were one step closer to redemption. In the final vs HTS, we were the stronger team as our offence was too much to handle, and our strong defence, backstopped by Bizzare, was determined to win. The referees and "interesting" goal celebrations created some drama for us. However, we beat HTS 4-2 to earn the Senior Divison Championship and a banner that will hang in the Gym forever.

This team was an absolute pleasure to coach. We carried a large group of 28 skaters, and they all constantly battled hard and played with energy in practice and during games. They also supported one another, which created a fun team atmosphere.

In 2022-2023 the RSGC Varsity Hockey team had its first full season since the year that Covid curtailed the conducting of school sports activities. Returning to the ice with practices at Forest Hill Arena and games at various Toronto and out-of-town locations was great. We finished with a 4-2-1 record and made it to the championship game against Crescent School at the Scotiabank Pond Arena in Downsview Park. We want to thank Mr James Donnelly and the Rev Dr Jim Leatch for coaching us this year. The members of the 2022-2023 squad were: Adley Abols, Sam Andersen, Ben Anderson, Daniel Anderson (Most Valuable Player), Joseph Birdsell-Farrow, Graham Davidge, Eric Graham, Jack Hulford, Yonas Nicola-Lalonde, Marcus Ochrym, Adam Papoushek (Georgian Spirit Award), Will Pearce, Ethan Pugiotto (Most Improved Player), Callum Rand, Angus Ternan, John Ternowetsky, Cole Terrelonge, Jackson Willner, and Rowan Yelle.

Congrats to the RSGC U14 Basketball Team on a strong finish ! After leaping out of the basement in the regular season to pull off an emphatic upset in the quarterfinals at TFS, it was a slow start in the semis to the undefeated TYS home team, eventually losing by single digits...but there was no quit in our boys, as they continued to fight until the final buzzer. Facing St. Andrew's College in the battle for third place, the boys finished strong with everyone contributing to earn themselves a bronze medal. We are very proud of these young men for playing hard for each other with a lot of heart, character, determination and sportsmanship. These boys were an absolute pleasure to coach, representing the school and themselves in a very positive manner wherever they played under any and all circumstances. GO KNIGHTS!

We began RSGC's first squash team in November 2022. We started off with 12 eager students, many of whom had limited experience with squash. After only a few practices at RCYC with a pair of incredible squash pros from the club, these students quickly became skilled and ready for competition! Our squash team began competing against other schools in January 2023, and we were amazed to see how fast our team had progressed to a competitive level where they began experiencing some hard-fought wins. We are so proud of the integrity and kindness that defined the community that we built, and we look forward to seeing our returning JS students on the court next fall!

Varsity Badminton

This year's Varsity badminton team was small but proud. Be it in early morning practices, long bus rides to Aurora or Port Hope, and in the moments in between, our players showed off Georgian spirit and values like humour, teamwork, and winning (and sometimes not winning), with grace and charity.

Our results at the final tournament showed that we had grit in the face of steep challenges. After a long day at Trinity College School, we placed competitively in a field of impressive talents, notching standout results from all our athletes.

This year RSGC and Branksome Hall were able to enter two competitive teams to the U14 Division-1 Ultimate League - a first for both schools! Together, we played several games against St-Michael's, BSS, Hawkegall, UCC, and Greenwood. Although most of our players were new to the game, we quickly learned the rules and how to deal with "foul" calls on the field and how not to say "CONTEST" immediately after a call. By the end of the season, our teams finished 3rd and 4th overall, and we could easily see everyone's improvement throughout the season. Many thanks to Coach Long, Coach Barker, and Coach Wilson for their support throughout the season.

Duke of Ed.

This year we marked the introduction of the Great Outdoor Adventure Club at Royal St. George's College. Ten boys enjoyed a challenging hike along the Bruce Trail above the waters of Georgian Bay at Lion's Head in the fall. We had clear skies and great views of the landscape. In June, six adventurous students decided to take a five-day canoe and hiking trip to Killarney Provincial Park. Despite some very long days, challenging paddling, and demanding hiking and portaging, all the boys had fun, and they are looking forward to our next adventure.

Hidden Gems

This celebration of all things performance returns to the chapel for an amazing evening of community talent. Hosted by Simon Cox, Sebastian Isaac-Gooden and Josh Tavares-Pitts, the evening was a huge success. Thank you to everyone who was brave enough to perform!

Arts Night

Arts Night returned as we celebrated Drama, Art, and Music with spectacular performances by both Junior and Senior students. Artwork from every media and visual arts student grade 3-12 was exhibited throughout the school buildings and outside.

The 1 Act Play performance, Love, Blood and Rhetoric also returned to the stage that night under the direction of Andrew Samsworth.

The Advancement department and the Guild joined in the excitement and contributed to a night to remember!

Steward Ties

Stewards are individuals who demonstrate outstanding leadership and service within the school throughout the year (usually more). These are not elected positions, but rather individuals who seek opportunities, on their own, to give back to the school community. Stewards partner with staff members to help organize and promote elements of interest to other students. Staff and faculty nominate stewards based on their observations of ongoing and significant leadership over a period of time.

The Stewards tie recognizes the commitment, the work accomplished, and the leadership of these deserving students.

Similarities between GWC & RSGC

Though there were many differences between the two schools, some of the similarities include:

Retail and Lunch
The way that food at Recess and Lunchtime was served, bought and eaten was almost identical to Watson's.

Open Green Spaces
We saw that greenery like trees and grass pitches were commonly found in RSGC, just as they are at Watson's.

The Classroom Setting
The way the class was taught, arranged and organised was quite similar to that of Watson's.

Omaha, Nebraska

Attending the Berkshire Hathaway AGM in Omaha, Nebraska, as part of the grade 12 Accounting course, was truly an invaluable experience. The opportunity to observe and learn from two of the greatest financial minds of our generation, Warren Buffet and Charlie Munger, has greatly enriched my understanding of financial management, investment strategy, and corporate governance. This trip was instrumental in reinforcing the ethical considerations in accounting and business which we have been exposed to throughout high school. Buffet and Munger's emphasis on integrity and long-term value creation provided a stark contrast to the often short-term focused business world. Their approach to value investing, backed by rigorous financial analysis and ethical business practices, has made me realize that value investing isn't just an outdated fad. In essence, it's the financial version of the American Dream - straightforward, lasting, and full of promise. The simplicity of Buffet's lifestyle, despite his enormous wealth, served as a powerful lesson on staying grounded, proving that true wealth isn't about ostentatious displays, but about making smart and sustainable choices. Our exploration of Berkshire Hathaway's diverse business portfolio, from conglomerates like BNSF Railway and GEICO to retail businesses such as See's Candies, was equally enlightening. The success story of See's Candies especially underscored the importance of product quality and customer satisfaction in ensuring long-term success. All said and done, this wasn't just an educational field trip; it felt like a quick dive into the deep end of the business pool. You bet it's left ripples in my future career aspirations. Our trip to Omaha, Nebraska, to attend the annual Berkshire Hathaway Shareholder's Meeting, and tune in to Warren Buffett was an enlightening experience that provided me with many valuable insights into the world of investing and business. As I listened to Mr. Buffett's wisdom, and observed his down-to-earth demeanor, it was evident that his success stemmed from a healthy mix of intelligence, integrity, and simplicity. Specifically, the home in which he resides in is more than humble. He does not see the point of extravagant purchases for the sake of it, and instead gradually grows his wealth to new heights without burning capital on materialistic goods. He emphasized the importance of long-term thinking, value investing, and understanding the fundamentals of businesses before investing. From this trip, I absorbed many vital lessons, such as the significance of patience, discipline, and a strong moral compass to achieve financial success.

The Berkshire Hathaway Shareholder's Meeting offered a once-in-a-lifetime glimpse into the remarkable brand Warren Buffett has built, as well as the company's vast investing portfolio. It became clear that Berkshire Hathaway's success is not entirely due to its investments, but also its corporate cohesiveness. The trip allowed us to observe transparency, shareholder empowerment, and commitment to long-term value creation. I learned the importance of positioning interests with shareholders, building trust, and cultivating a culture of learning and continuous improvement.

Overall, our trip to Omaha provided numerous invaluable lessons on investing, business understanding, as well as the qualities required for exponential success. Truly a remarkable experience.

Kingdom of Bhutan

Over March Break, seven Georgians and Ms. Dukes travelled to the Kingdom of Bhutan along with a group of girls from St. Mildred's-Lightbourn School and Alive Outdoors. We received a warm welcome at Gongzim Ugyen Dorji School in the town of Haa. We were given a tour of the school, attended classes, and even spent a night sleeping in the dorms. The students and staff were incredibly kind, and our time spent with them was a highlight of the trip. From rafting and temple visits to hiking, camping, and experiencing the awe-inspiring Tiger's Nest Monastery, every moment in Bhutan was remarkable. This once-in-a-lifetime experience and the kindness and generosity we experienced in Bhutan will truly be unforgettable. The boys on the trip were: Luke Mazan, John Kerlovich, Jonny Laurin, John MacPherson, Xavier D'Souza, and Andrew Ukraine, Isaac Feiner.

Choir Tour

From June 17-25, a superb choir of senior school tenors and basses enjoyed a hugely successful tour of Spain. Our first performance in the stunning Cathedral of Avila earned the boys a standing ovation from a capacity crowd (including the mayor!). From the baroque jewel of San Antonio de los Alemanes in Madrid, the breathtaking Church of San Nicolas Valencia, the massive audience at the Basilica of Santa Maria Montserrat and a final musical triumph at the Unesco World Heritage Site, the Sagrada Familia in Barcelona, the young men of the choir garnered praise for their deportment and effusive commentary for their singing which was unfailingly assured. The college choir showed our school at its finest in a tour one parent described as "The best ever." A morning at the beach in Barcelona and a shopping spree made up a suitable reward for our hard-working boys. Congratulations to our most excellent choir, and thanks to the parents and staff who enthusiastically supported this once-in-a-lifetime experience
